Grace is 6 years old. She loves going to the park with James, her father. They play ball and spend hours in the playground. On a good day, James lets Grace buy a treat from the snack truck. One day, after playing ball all afternoon, James and Grace stop at the truck for a treat. James buys an apple for himself. Grace gets a granola bar and some bubble gum. When they finish their snacks, they begin to walk home. "I'm really tired," says Grace. "Can you carry me?" "You're pretty big to be carried! Let's try this," says James as he lifts Grace and puts her on his shoulders. After a few minutes, Grace starts to pull her father's hair. She pulls and pulls. "Ouch!" says James. "What's going on? Stop pulling my hair. It hurts!" "But Dad," she says, "I'm only trying to get out my bubble gum."
