Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow.From "The Lost Symphony" by Gabriel Rivers:

In the vibrant city of Harmonia, Lucia, a prodigious violinist, wove enchanting melodies that bewitched the hearts of her listeners. Yet, beneath her virtuosity lay a profound sorrow, a burden carried in the form of a lost symphony, an unfinished masterpiece her late father had left behind. Each note she played resonated with the echoes of her father's unfulfilled dreams. Lucia's dedication to her father's legacy was unwavering. Night after night, in the quiet sanctuary of her room, she delved into the haunting melodies of the incomplete symphony. Her violin became a conduit to her father's spirit, and with each stroke, she sought to bridge the gap between the existing notes and those that remained unwritten.

Driven by an unyielding determination, Lucia immersed herself in the study of her father's compositions. Her music became a testament to her love for him, a tribute expressed through the strings of her violin. In the luminous glow of Harmonia's moonlit nights, Lucia's melodies grew not just in technical brilliance but also in emotional depth. Her performances became a dialogue between the earthly realm and the ethereal world, a communion with her father's soul. With each passing day, Lucia's violin weaved a tale of resilience and devotion. The city, once merely a backdrop, became an audience to her metamorphosis. Her music, a fusion of talent and deep-seated passion, resonated through the cobblestone streets and into the hearts of all who heard. In the hushed silence of her music, Harmonia found solace, and Lucia, in her pursuit of completing her father's legacy, discovered her own uncharted depths. And so, in just three hundred words, Lucia's story became a testament to the timeless power of music and the enduring bond between a daughter and her father's dreams.
